5 OPEC ministers meet in Madrid

MADRID (AP) - Oil ministers from five Organisation of Petroleum Exporting (OPEC) states met Sunday for three hours at the Indonesian embassy in emergency session seeking ways to stem production and shore up international crude prices. "We heard a long report on the state of the market, which is not very good," said a senior OPEC delegate, who asked not to be further identified. The delegate said the ministers from Algeria, Nigeria, Venezuela, Saudi Arabia and Indonesia were to meet again later Saundy night. The talks, which analysts surmised would not produce any dramatic results, take place in the context of a slumping crude market due largely to a spurt in production by members of the 13-member OPEC. OPEC Chairman and Nigerian Oil Minister Rilwanu Lukman, who is attending the Madrid meeting, said last week in Indonesia the group would take a look at over-production as well as cooperation between OPEC and non-OPEC producers. The five-member price evolution committee cannot make any binding decisions. But it could determine whether the organisation should hold a full meeting before its fall gathering scheduled Nov. 21 in Vienna.

Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe and British Tory MP blasts

By Nermeen Murad Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN - The British public views the "Palestinians as the oppressed, (and) Israel is terrorist," according to a senior Conservative Party member of the British parliament and head of the U.K.-Palestinian parliamentary group.

"The British public is being fed on a strong nauseous diet of Israeli atrocities on their television screens for a long period of time," said Tony Marlow, who is here on a visit that included the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Britain "is committed to Palestinian self-determination, and self-determination means that the Palestinians themselves will decide in the context of the region... but it will remain a Palestinian decision."

The British member of parliament (MP), who headed a threemember delegation made up of Conservative MPs on the visit to Jordan and the occupied territories, had strong words to condemn Israel's often-brutal handling of the ten-month-old Palestinian uprising.

"On the one hand, we saw the results of the handiwork of the Israeli defence forces, their brutality, callousness and the arrogance..." Marlow said. But these sentiments were in direct contrast to the "high moral and determination of the Palestinian people to achieve (self-determination) for themselves..." he said. Also speaking Monday are heads of state, premiers or foreign ministers representing 10 other nations, including Brazil. Ghana, Finland, Norway and

Reagan's farewell speech to the United Nations comes after nearly eight years during which he has pilloried the body for what he called anti-Western bias and bloated bureaucracy. The Reagan administration drove the United Nations to the brink of closure by withholding U.S. dues, but Reagan had a change of heart this month. Reagan announced his satisfaction with the U.N.'s progress in trimming its staff and budget Sept. 13, and said America would pay more than a halfbillion dollars in back dues to the United Nations in three to five years.

On Monday (Sept. 19) a General Assembly budget committee reached consensus on a 1990-91 -two-year budget of $1.76 billion, about nine per cent lower than the equivalent 1988-89 budget figure, largely due to a 13 per cent staff cut.

Reagan also called attention to the world body's success in mediating the Afghan accords leading to a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, and the truce between Iran and Iraq. Other major speakers this French President Francois Mitterrand and Cameroun President Paul Biya Speak Thursday, and Sierra Leone's President Joseph Saidu Momeh takes the stand Friday.

Reagan will mount the podium to face the 159 delegations of the 43rd General

Dante Caputo, the Argentine foreign minister who will preside over the General Assembly, said Thursday that the "need to | start to make progress on the economic injustices that divide us" is as important as consolidating the Afghan accords and the Iran-Iraq truce.

The General Assembly plans to tackle 149 agenda items.

Shamsuddine's works express something of Lebanon's turmoil

By Meg Abu Hamdan Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — Exhibiting at the Petra Bank Art Gallery this week is a young Lebanese artist, Mohammad Shamsuddine, who many feel is one of the few artists around able to express through his work something of the turmoil his country has endured for the past decade. One of the people to believe very strongly in Shamsuddine's talent is Riyad Khoury, who was so impressed by his work that he organised this show here in Amman for the artist.

"I believe," Mr. Khoury told the Jordan Times, "that because Mohammad comes from the heart of the south of Lebanon and because of his highly cosmopolitan training in art schools in both Italy and France we have here a product of the fusion of East and West that depicts the essence of the problems in Lebanon. Shamsuddine's inspiration is one hundred per cent Eastern Islamic, Kufic even, but his inter-coloured it dominates the glowing pastel shades of its surroundings so that one can contemplate its curves and lines as did the ancient Shamsuddine also uses calligraphy in his small mixed media abstracts but to a totally different effect. From far, these paintings seem to be unrelentingly dark, their blackness unrelieved like the streets of Beirut where no street lamp, no car headlight, no glow from surrounding houses penetrates the night. When you

pretation is one hundred per cent

Shamsuddine's oil paintings

Khoury's assertions for although come closer, they start to come

Like the shredded posters on the walls of Beirut's crumbling buildings, a rough Hessian texture punctures the large muscling black shapes allowing tiny drops of colour to glimmer through, while etched across their surfaces wind the scrawl of street graffiti. Other spidery letters traced in reds, blues and greens mix with a myriad of tiny lines that dart here and there, defying reason in their anarchical haste.

Every so often, all this chaos suddenly comes to a halt as the eye is drawn to a small hovering square, the motif Eastern mystics believe symbolises the four ele-ments. Complex, intellectual, these abstracts relate, as Mr. Khoury says, "to the actual streets of Beirut and more to the point to the feeling you get when walking down them. A description that makes Shamsuddine's work seem grim and unappealing, something they are not, for the artist has managed to depict these ideas in a way that helps us to face their reality rather than turn away from them. Through these abstracts he fascinates us, intrigues and often mystifies us capturing our attention so that we can see like him a glimmer of hope.

Finally brighter, lighter, but still uneasy in their general feel are Shamsuddine's pastels on coloured paper. At first these seem more hopeful, less chaotic, but slowly one realises the colours that glow through are as Mr. Khoury says not healthy ones. Verging on the edge of hysteria. these works disturb and agitate the mind. But again they are not unattractive, instead they stimulate, excite, keep us interested and alert. In fact do what art is supposed to do. The exhibition which opened Sunday runs for one week.

2nd 'march for charity' to be held in Amman

By Najwa Najjar Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN — The second March for Charity kicks off on Oct. 28, with hopes that more money will be raised for the treatment of patients at the society for care of neurological patients at Palestine Hospital and at the Jordanian Cancer Society.

For the second consecutive year, the Society for care of Neurological Patients has decided that the best fundraiser is mother charity march.

According to the Director of the Society for Care of Neurological Patients, Nadia Alami, last year's charity march across Jordan, from Ramtha to Aqaba, raised JD 50,000. Unlike last year, this year's charity march will not cover 450 kilometres, but rather 28 kilometres within Amman. The Amman march will be held under the patronage of Her Majesty Queen Noor, who also plans to participate in the walk. The reason behind the reduced distance was, "we could not find any men to walk the full distance," said Alami. Alami said that three females volunteered to walk the distance. but "this year no one was willing to sponsor them plus they got cold feet about sleeping in the countryside.'

Also unlike last year, the money raise on Oct. 28 will be for both the patients of the Society for Care of Neurological Patients at Palestine Hospital and the Jordan Cancer Society. Both societies have been coordinating closely for the past couple of "The Jordan Cancer Society asked us for help, and we figured that the best way to raise money would be another sponsored charity march," said Alami.

Already close to 2000 individuals have voiced their readiness to participate in the walk which will take them from the Plaza Hotel to the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth circles, and the Nazik Al Hariri Centre. back down Mecca street to Jubilee Circle and ending back at the Plaza Hotel.

The walk will begin at 9:00 a.m. and is expected to end at around 6:00 p.m. the first walker (runners not included) to complete the distance will win a 1988 panda car.

Petra Bank, the primary sponsor of the charity march, is offering several prizes as well. Plaza another important sponsor.

Anyone who wishes to participate can pick up a sponsor form at Palestine Hospital on Oct. 1. No registration fee is required.

Nearly 2,000 doctors and specialists from Jordan and countries around the world will take part in the meetings, which will be held under the title of "Doctors in the Service of Humanity," according to Jordanian Medical Association (JMA) President Mamdouh Al Abbadi.

Abbadi said that the three-day Jordanian Medical Conference will review some 100 working papers submitted by famous specialists from the United States, the United Kingdom, Italy, Spain, Greece, Canada, the Soviet Union, Egypt, Tunisia. Lebanon, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Palestine and Iraq, in addition to Jordan which will alone offer 62

A wide range of subjects, from blood diseases to early diagnosis of cancer, will be reviewed in these papers, according to

During the conference seminars will be organised to focus attention on Arabisation of medical teaching, which, according to recommendations by the Arab Doctors Union, should start in the Arab World during this year and will continue for 10 years, Abbadi pointed out.

The health situation in the occupied Arab territories and means of dealing with unemployment among Arab doctors will also be examined by the delegates, Abbadi noted. A medical exhibition will be organised by a number of major pharmaceutical companies in Jordan and abroad during the conference and delegates will be taken on trips to a number of archaeological sites and development projects in the Kingdom, Abbadi added.

The JMA which is organising the conference next month usually holds similar gatherings bien-nially, according to Abbadi. The Arab Union of Dermatologists, in their forthcoming meeting, will focus attention on rare skin diseases which result from the use of chemicals in industries and at homes, according to Dr. Mamdouh Al Qutob, the union's secretary general.

Private universities needed

IT took royal intervention to liberalise the university acceptance standards in Jordan, thus ending much unnecessary heartache that had hitherto permeated the whole university qualifications process.

Before the personal intervention of His Majesty King Hussein, upon the recommendation of His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan, the policies of Jordan's four universities imposed undue hardships on Jordanian students wishing to pursue higher education within the Kingdom.

The rigidity of the old regime in the acceptance of Jordanian students reached such a stage that even students who scored 90 in the Tawjihi general examination were prohibited from enrolling at any Jordanian university, let alone choosing fields of study that meet their aptitudes and

We are gratified to note that henceforth all Jordanian students who score 80 or above in the Tawjihi will be assured a seat at one of the Jordanian universities.

Yet this perpetual problem associated with university enrollment in Jordan cannot be permanently resolved until we introduce private universities to the higher educational system in Jordan, to alleviate the unacceptable strain on the existing four state universities. Just as the state of elementary and secondary levels of education in Jordan had to be rescued by the introduction of several private schools to help cope with the growing student population, we believe that the introduction of private universities in our country would serve the same function.

Many parents would naturally prefer to keep their children on Jordanian soil for the first four years of university education at least; and any private expansion of the availability of university education in Jordan would go a long way to answer the prayers of Jordanians, students and parents alike. There are currently 40,000 Jordanian students studying abroad.

Meanwhile, we add our voice to those who have already expressed thanks and appreciation to the royal interest in

IN its Sunday editorial Al Ra'i Arabic daily commented on Prime Minister Zaid Rifai's visit Saturday to Baghdad and said that the talks he held with Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan were constructive and aimed to enhance solidarity among Arab countries. Rifai's reiteration of Jordan's total support for Iraq and Jordan's pride in Iraqi victories and endeavours to reach peace with Iran reflected the Kingdom's firm and determined stand with regard to the Gulf question, the paper said. Continued consultations between the leadership in Amman and Baghdad are bound to boister joint action and boost the Arab Nation's stand on the regional and international levels, Al Ra'i

FOR its part, Al Dustour Arabic daily described Jordanian-Iraqi relations as exemplary and constantly being strengthened in the interest of the Jordanian and Iraqi peoples. The paper referred to Jordan's firm support for Iraq in its eight-year-long war with Iran and said "today Jordan takes a firm stand by sister Iraq in the long and difficult battle for peace. Jordan is also aware of the objectives behind the hostile campaign being waged on Iraq and the allegations being levelled against that country with regard to the question of Kurdish rebels.

Al Shaab Arabic daily also dwelled on Rifai's visit to Baghdad and stressed Jordan's backing for Iraq's endeavours to implement U.N. Security Council Resolution 598. "There is no doubt that Jordan's support for Iraq as demonstrated by His Majesty King Hussein's stands at regional and international levels, constitutes a model of brotherly solidarity for all Arabs," the editorial said. It added: "Jordan supports Iraq which has been defending the Arab order in the face of Iranian aggression... and continues to support that country's efforts for peace in the face of Iran's procrastina-

Health for all

WRITING in Al Dustour daily, columnist Ahmad Al Hisban comments on a conference on maternal health which has opened at the University of Jordan Saturday. The writer refers to Health Minister Zaid Hamzeh's statement in which the minister said that half a million of the world's pregnant mothers die annually for reasons that could be avoided, and that 99 per cent of these mothers live in the Third World. "It is of paramount importance then that the question of healthy motherhood acquire most attention by national authorities and international organisations." the writer adds. "In Jordan, the Ministry of Health has spared no effort in its cooperation with world organisations and in launching organised campaigns through the information media, through lectures and other means to spread awareness among mothers on means of caring for themselves and their children." Hisban points out. He expresses confidence that "through its continued endeavours, the Kingdom is bound to attain the World Health Organisation's goal of "health for all by the year 2000".

Making a legal point

By Waleed Sadi

AMMAN'S 31st of July political decision to severe legal and administrative ties with the West Bank was fortunately, unqualified by the adjective "all." We lawyers and jurists normaly have a field day with such subtraction of words in the proclamation of major

To be sure from a strictly legal point of view, the absence of this word in the text announcing the breaking of "legal and administrative" "relations with the West Bank and its people does not negate, IPSO facto, the proposition that ALL legal and administrative ties were contemplated and intended in the decision of July 31. Yet the debate on how to legally construct the absence of the word "all" before the words "legal and administrative ties" "could continue if one chooses to be legalistic about the full dimensions and scope of

This debate could assume an added meaning in the wake of the deliberate decision to exclude the Islamic institutions from the purview of the decision of severance. Indeed the continuance of granting Jordanian passports to the Palestinians of the West Bank even though for shorter validity could be also interpreted as added evidence that not "all" legal and administrative ties were projected to be severed at this stage.

But this is not all. As Jordan is busily engaged now in the process of rectifying and amending its laws and regulations in order to reflect more faithfully what is essentially a political declaration, a legal point or two are in order: first of all, we must recall that to give full effect to the political proclamation severing legal and administrative ties with the West Bank, we must translate that decision into legal manifestations as indeed we are now in the process of doing.

But in doing so, we may not resort to "regulation" to amend existing laws. The cardinal principle of law is that laws supercede regulations and if any regulation gets adjudicated as repugnant to the constitution or laws of Jordan it will be struck down in a court of law. Moreover, amended laws cannot enjoy retroactive effect. Again this is a well established principle of law in practically all the jurisprudences that I know of, including Jordan's. Therefore we have to be careful with the legal implications of the efforts to affect changes in our laws and accord them retroactive effect.

A case in point could be the citizenship laws. If a person acquires Jordanian citizenship in accordance with existing laws, he or she may not be denied that acquired right by introducing amendments to that law. Amendments to this and other similar laws are applicable to new cases and situations and not to old acquired rights and privileges. This is on the domestic scene.

On the international level the legal problems associated with the Jordanian decision to sever legal and administrative ties with the West Bank and its people are also formidable. I presume that our legal experts are aware of the need to take measures to give full credit to this decision internationally. Practically all of our treaty obligations are affected by this decision and all of them await rectifications according to the international due process.

One particular bilateral agreement that needs addressing is the 1949 Jordanian-Israeli Armistice Agreement. Surely our international experts know that that agreement which was endorsed by the United Nations cannot be abrogated or amended or declared null and void by any unilateral action by any of the parties concerned. It just happens that that accord is still valid and operative legally irrespective of the 31 July decision to sever legal and administrative ties with the West Bank.

It will be recalled in this context that the elementary articles of that agreement prescribe that the armistice lines existing between Jordan and Israel cannot be altered except with the consent of the two parties, i.e., Israel and Jordan. The ceasefire lines that are observed now by both beliggerent countries came in the aftermath of the 1967 war and at no time did any side argue, legally that is, that the ceasefire lines supercede the armistice lines. I would like to invite the attention of our authorities to this and other points that

In modern nation-states, where every measure or policy must be reflected in a sound legal formulation, it is necessary to examine the full and complete legal implications of any measure or policy. I feel certain that our concerned authorities are fully aware that the legal implications, domestic as well as international, of the historic decision which enunciated the breaking of legal and administrative ties with the West Bank and its people are infinite. The process of completing the legal homework of such a large step is clearly a nightmare for jurists. But it has to be done. Otherwise the docks of the courts in Jordan would become saturated with contentious legal issues arising from the political decision.

'Jordanian constitution has highest regard to human rights'

The following are major excerpt from an address made by Senator Ahmad Tarawneh to the current International Parliamentarian Union conference held in Sofia, Bulgaria.

leader His Majesty King Hussein -- adopted a slogan which it righteously regarded as a precious component of its values and priorities: That is "The Human Being Is Our Most Valuable Asset." This slogan has been in application — by word and deed in the various aspects of life: Political, economical, legal, legislative, educational and health not to mention whatever bolsters the dignity, pride and the wellbeing of individuals. This policy is the practical outcome of the principles contained in the 1952 Constitution and the various amend- of Parliament over the last dements thereto that aim at bring- cades the maintenance of which in the concepts of human rights in cial authority which is indepenthat enriches humans and humanity in a society of freedom, sufficiency and justice.

In this respect I will use some of your precious time to quote portions of Chapter II of the Constitution of Jordan tackling the question of human rights as related to the duties and rights of Jordan and our House of Parlia-Jordanians:

Article 6 provides: (I) Jordanians shall be equal before the law. There shall be discrimination between them as regards their rights and duties on grounds of race, language or reli-ported from the territory of the Kingdom.

"No Jordanian may be prevented from residing at any place, or be compelled to reside in any specified place, except in the circumstances prescribed by law."

"Dwelling houses shall be in-violable and shall not be entered except in the circumstances and in the manner prescribed by law. "No property of any person may be expropriated except for purposes of public utility and in consideration of a just compensation, as may be prescribed by law. "No loans may be forcibly imposed and no property, movable or immovable, may be confiscated except in accordance with 'Compulsory labour may not be imposed on any person, but any person may be required to do any work or to render any service in circumstances prescribed by

Article 14 of the Constitution provides: "The State shall safeguard the free exercise of all forms or worship and religious rites in accordance with the customs observed." Article 15 of the Constitution provides: "The State shall guarantee freedom of opinion. Every Jordanian shall be free to express his opinion by speech, in writing, or by means of photographic representation and other forms of expression, provided that such does not violate the law."

Article 16 provides:

JORDAN - as stated by its right to hold meetings and are entitled to establish societies and political parties provided that the objects of such societies and parties are lawful, their methods peaceful, and their bi-laws not contrary to the provisions of the Constitution.

What I have just quoted as examples of the principles of human rights provided for in the Constitution of Jordan are not mere fine and idealistic phrases; they are principles that have been put into effect and application in laws, institutions and daily activities endorsed by Jordan's House ing it into line with developments has been guaranteed by the judiorder for them to be a fact of life dent from both the legislative and executive authorities

Thus with all pride I note that the international human rights committees have never summoned Jordan to stand before them to defend any violations of human rights

· As such it is quite normal for ment to be fully and continuously prepared to develop international cooperation in the humanitarian field and to bring national legislation into line with international human rights norms, principles and instruments.

I may go even further to note to this conference that His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan, took the initative in 1981, 1982 and the following years to submit to the U.N. an ambitious framework which was adopted by the U.N. General Assembly to establish a new international humanitarian order. It is regarded as an advanced step in the field of human rights and human communities. It embodies the establishment of the bases for dealing with various catastrophes and tragedies befalling human societies as a result of natural causes or otherwise, which exceed the capabilities of any individual society.

I am aware that each country has its own circumstances when drafting a legislation; however, there are general legislations that are governed by international criteria and joint intersts amongst groups of countries which relate to the existence of human beings and their dignity and right in a decent life free from illness, hunger and illiteracy.

'Intifada sends the world a message'

By Jim Shevis

WASHINGTON — The ninemonth-old Palestinian uprising, or "intifada," in Israeli-occupied territories is "sending a message to the world" that "we are going to be free," Mubarak Awad, founder of the Jerusalem-based Palestinian Centre for the Study of Nonviolence, said in a Sept. 19 speech here.

The word "intifada" means 'shaking," said Awad, a Palestinian Christian and a naturalised American citizen, adding the movement has already succeeded in shaking Israeli authorities to the point where they seem ready to compromise.

of his Georgetown University address to a largely student audience of 200, Awad stressed that the Palestinians' ultimate goal is a separate state of their own. 'We need our own state, we need to govern ourselves, we need our own national anthem and our own flag," he said.

At both the beginning and end

So far, the Israeli government has been unwilling to share power in the occupied territories with the Palestinians, he said, but there are peace groups in Israel that are coming around to that point of view.

"There is a lot of hope there," be said.

Awad has posed a problem for the Israeli authorities ever since he opened his Palestinian Centre for the Study of Nonviolence in Jerusalem three years ago. The Israeli government finally deported him for his activities in behalf of the Palestinian Arabs. The deportation — on grounds his tourist visa had expired drew protests from the U.S. State Department and thousands of letters of sympathy.

The Israelis "found it difficult to deal with a man and a movement evoking memories of Gandhi and Martin Luther King, Jr., said Professor Hisham Sharabi of the Georgetown University Centre for Cotemporary Arab Studies, who introduced Awad.

The Centre for the Study of Nonviolence, which is still active, embraces the use of civil disobedience and nonviolence advocated by Indian political and spiritual leader Mohandas Gandhi to secure India's independence from British colonial rule in 1947, said Awad. Gandhi's concepts also were espoused and implemented by King to halt segregation in the United States.

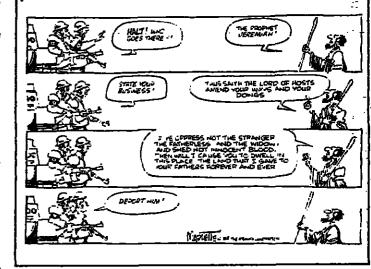

"We found that Arabs never invented weapons. They got them from other countries, Awad said. 'So, if they didn't invent weapons, why then could they not employ the techniques of civil disobedience and nonviolence? Islam and Christianity are similar in that both embrace nonviolence, he noted. It was only when Christianity became institutionalised that it turned to war, he said. Awad acknowledged he is and always has been a supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO), but does not necessarily agree with everything the PLO stands for. He stressed that Palestinian Arabs are not out to defeat the Israelis militarily. "Nonviolence and civil disobedience is to look the Israelis in the eye... to meet with them and to speak with them," he said. "As Palestinians, we have no justice under any kind of Israeli law," Awad added The purpose of nonviolence within the context of the Palestinian problem is to make Israeli occupation of Arab territories expensive, Awad said. Embracing Gandhian concepts, the spirit of the intifada has unified and strengthened the Palestinians as never before, he said.

"The idea of spirituality with the intifada means there is a deep commitment within the Palesti- Palestinian concerns. Awad was nian people," he said. "This has highly critical of U.S. diplomacy never happened before. This is what I call empowerment."

Before it is too late

By Anthony Lewis

IN Jerusalem last June several dozen Israeli and Palestinian writers, artists and academics signed a symbolic peace treaty. It called for peace between Israel and a Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza, each respecting the other's need for security.

One of the Palestinian signers was Tayseer Aruri, a professor of physics and mathematics at Birzeit University in the West Bank. On Aug. 8, Israeli police arrested Professor Aruri. On Aug. 17, the Defence Minister, Yitzhak Rabin, ordered him deported.

Over the last month, in prison, Professor Aruri has been trying to save himself the prospect of exile and separation from his family. But like other Palestinians marked for deportation in recent years, he has only limited opportunities to defend himself against that drastic punishment.

To appeal against deportation, Aruri first had to go to a military committee of three officers. The committees are only advisory. They make recommendations to the military commander, and seldom if ever have they recommended against a deportation. Moreover, the crucial evidence considered by the committee is unknown to the person ordered deported. In Aruri's case he and his lawyer (but not his family or the press) were first allowed into the committee hearing. But after a time they were excluded and. for four hours, the officers heard intelligence reports in secret. The militatry prosecutor in-

In committee proceedings some more detailed accusations were disclosed to Professor Aruri. They included matters of so little weight that it is hard to believe they could be considered relevant.

For example, it was said that in 1984 Professor Aruri spoke at a memorial service for a professor who had died of cancer. He said then that his colleague had died "still loving his earth and his people." No doubt that was a reminder of Palestinians' feeling for their birthplace. But how could it be criminal, much less ground for deportation?

Professor Aruri's lawver. Awad Boulos, said to me: "I'm struggling against shadows. Pro-fessor Aruri signed the peace declaration. If a man who gives two hands for peace is deported. tell us why. If such people are exiled, those who don't want peace will have triumphed."

If the deportation order is upheld by the military committee and the commander, Boulos can take Professor Aruri's case to the high court. But there again he will run into the daunting problem of secret charges and inability to examine the evidence.

Military prosecutors regularly ask the high court to consider secret evidence in deportation activist in the Palestinian Com- court has almost always yielded to claims of military necessity in disturbing the public order." He the occupied territories - and refused to interfere with deporta-

From a distance, one cannot know all the facts about Tayseer Aruri. But one can know that the deportation proceeding against is a mockery of justice. If he has committed a crime he should be prosecuted in open court, or open evidence. In any event, the Geneva Convention explicitly bars casting him out of his birthplace.

Professor Aruri is not alone in trying to stave off, without due process, what justice brandeis called the loss of "all that makes life worth living": Exile from one's native land. Deportation orders are pending against 25 Palestinians. Since last December, 33 others have been deported.

The Reagan administration criticised the latest round of deportation orders in strong terms. as violations of international law. They are that. But more important, they are violations of the most fundamental sense of fairness in societies that live by rule of law.

The growing number of deportations — without real evi-dence or witnesses — casts an even darker shadow on the future. It eases the way, psychologically, for a far more terrible policy: Mass expulsion of Palestinians from the occupied territoties. The idea of a "transfer of population," as it is euphemistically called, was once unthinkable but is now freely discussed in Israel - The New York Times

Indian press deals Gandhi another blow

By Rajendra Bajpai

NEW DELHI - Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, reeling from a string of electoral setbacks and severe damage to his "Mr. Clean" image, has taken yet another bodyblow — at hands of the Indian press. The 44-year-old leader Thursday announced he was dropping a defamation bill which had provoked opposition of a ferocity unprecedented even by the unrestrained standards of India's boisterous press.

His decision not to pursue the bill, which newspapers saw as a bid to kill investigative jourualism, came as abruptly as his action last month in rushing it through the lower house of "Jordanians shall have the parliament without public debate come attention to alleged kick-or discussion in his own party. Journalists and newspaper proprietors were united against the bill and boycotted all briefings and news conferences by Gandhi's ministers unless they took a stand against it.

"The climbdown by the government was due to extraordinary exertion of public opinion," said opposition parliamentarian P. Upendra. 'He doesn't want to give a campaign point to the opposition and he also doesn't want a hostile press in an election year," he Gandhi, who will be seeking

Opposition from within

He has also had to contend with opposition from within his own party. Congress members privately complain that Gandhi is inaccessible to most of them and that free debates no longer take place within the party.

K.P. Unnikrishnan, an opposition MP, said the bill had done house Congress member, said of

Gandhi serious damage with political parties, civil liberties groups

"I don't think it will make much difference now that he has withdrawn the bill. The damage has already been done," he said.

Among the bill's most con-troversial elements was a clause which would have forced defendants in libel cases to prove their innocence, reversing the principle of India law which puts the burden of proof on the prosecution.

It also sought to considerably widen the definition of defamation and provided stiff jail terms for offenders.

Congress Party members were relieved when Gandhi decided to let the bill drop.

Gandhi's decision: "It is a welcome step. In a democracy-any. and others joining in denouncing prime minister who heeds public opinion, goes up in (esteem)."

MIDDLE EAST NEWS IN BRIEF

'israel developing high-speed satellite'

LONDON (AP) — Israel is developing a reconnaissance satellite to be launched at short notice in times of crisis and capable of transmitting pictures of an enemy's troop movements and weapons systems, the Sunday Times of London reported. The newspaper said the Ofek-1 satellite that Israel launched last week is the prototype of the new system and "once perfected, more satellites will be prepared for launching at the first sign of tension in the Middle East." It said the United States helped to produce the three-stage solid fuel propulsion system of the launch rocket, known as Savit, and is expected to develop a similar system for itself if the Israeli test is successful. The newspaper, quoting unidentified military sources in Israel, said the Ofek-1 is designed to be launched "with minimal notice and to orbit at low altitude for about a month," The Ofek-1 would circle over Arab countries every 90 minutes, spying on troops movements and weapons systems and transmitting live pictures direct to Israeli army commanders, it said. "If a war or period of tension lasted longer than a month, another satellite would be launched," the newspaper said.

BAGHDAD (Agencies) — Former United States senator Gary Hart conferred Sunday with Iraq's Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz, Baghdad Radio reported. The radio gave no details of the meeting. The official Iraqi News Agency reported Hart had earlier conferred with Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Saadoun Hamadi. The agency said Hamadi referred during the Saturday meeting to "the current Israeliincited anti-Iraq campaign by the United States Senate." This was a reference to a Senate decision to impose sanctions on Iraq for alleged use of poison gas against Kurdish-rebels. INA said

Hamadi pointed out to Hart that the Senate "has no evidence whatsoever to prove the alleged use of chemical weapons by Iraq The Senate move has resulted in marked deterioration of the previous close relations between the two

Freed Kuwaiti thanks British police

NORTHAMPTON, England (AP) - A kidnapped Kuwaiti millionaire, rescued by police after a four-day ordeal, said Saturday that he had thought he was going to die and owed his life to the local police force. "Thank you is just a small word," said 38-year-old businessman Walleed Al Humaidh, "But to me, today, it has a world of meaning." Scotland Yard and Northamptonshire police, acting on a tip, freed Humaidh Friday night from a north London house and said they were questioning two Belgians, a 41-year-old woman and a 31-year-old man, at police stations in Northampton.

israeli. Czechoslovak ministers to meet

TEL AVIV (R) - Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and his Czechoslovak counterpart Bohuslav Chnoupek this week will hold the first open talks between their two states in 21 years, the Israeli foreign minister said on Sunday, "The meeting will be in New York where both men will be for the United Nations General Assembly and it will probably take place Tuesday," a spokesman told reporters. Peres said last week he believed Czechoslovakia would follow other East European states and renew limited diplomatic ties with Israel, severed over the 1967 Middle East war. Czechoslovakia, together with all other East bloc states except Romania, broke ties with Israel during the war. Both Poland and Hungary renewed low-level official ties with Israel over the past year and there have also been consular or other contacts with the Soviet Union and Bulgaria.

Mahdi: Outsiders pressuring Sudan to abolish Islamic laws

By Mohammad Osman The Associated Press

KHARTOUM, Sudan - Prime Minister Sadek Al Mahdi has spoke of foreign pressure on his country to abolish its Islamic legal code, an issue so sensitive that non-Muslim members are boycotting parliament. Speaking in a radio interview Saturday shortly before leaving to visit North Yemen and South Yemen, Al Mahdi defended Islamic laws and said the pressure from Arab and non-Arab countries could backfire.

The intervention of these sides will provoke us more and more," Al Mahdi said. "The foreign pressure is unacceptable and may lead to opposite results.' He did not specify the countries that allegedly have interfered in consideration by the constituent assembly, Sudan's parliament, of a substitute set of laws to replace ones on the books for five years. They have not been en-forced either under military rulers who took power in 1985 or under Al Mahdi's government, elected a year later.

The code put before the assembly last Monday suggests that Islamic law, including its criminal punishment section that sets stern punishments like stoning adultresses to death and amoutating thieves' limbs, be applied both to Muslims and non-Muslims in regions where most people are Muslims. Areas with a Christian and animist majority, mainly in southern Sudan, would be exempted from the laws.

Southern Sudanese parliamentarians walked out of the assembly Monday, when the substitute laws were presented for debate. Even members of Al Mahdi's own Umma Party and the second-largest party, the Democratic Unionists, have expressed opposition to the prop-liamentary sessions, only 40 to 45 of the 264 members attended.

The constituent assembly has set up a nine-member committee chaired by the speaker, Mohammad Youssef Mohammad, to organise a presentation by other parties of alternatives to the substitute laws. The front, which drafted the substitute legal code, is a partner in Al Mahdi's coalition with the prime minister's Umma and the Democratic Unionists, both centrist parties. BEIRUT — Fighting Kalashgroup of Lebanese volunteers port of Tripoli. have started a chain of "friendship restaurants" where they hope the country's bitter conflicts will dissolve over the first course.

"It is amity, not politics or military might, that unites people " said former Lebanese President Charles Helou, now chairman of the Association of the Friends of Amity Restaurants (AFAR).

'I am not 100 per cent sure we will succeed in our endeavour, but we have to try and turn the restaurants into solidarity centres," said Helou.

The restaurants provide free meals for up to 500 under-privileged people a day. There are no paying customers.

Helou and his 14 co-members of the association, recently granted charity status by the government, are pledged under the AFAR charter to "work for the development of the spirit of solidarity between hosts and guests."

AFAR has bought the necessary rudimentary tables and cooking utensils. The cost of meals is met through financial contributions mainly from wealthy private donors. Also, aid-in-kind is offered by charitable organisations.

The association hopes that by chatting over a wholesome meal, Lebanese of different sects and allegiances will learn to trust each other and put aside the weapons with which they have waged 13 years of civil war.

The 15 AFAR members pay an annual subscription and meet the full costs of at least one meal a year each in one of the association's restaurants.

Marlow appeared convinced that these wornes and concerns would make Israel accept the reality "that there is no alternative to coming to some sort of a solution." He said the Jordanian break with the West Bank "is going to help" the Palestinian quest for liberation and self-determination. Asked how he assessed Jordan's break with the West Bank to make way for the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) to shoulder its responsibilities as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, Marlow said: 'King Hussein has allowed the Palestinians to take the initiative, clarify the situation and clear the air themselves.

"They (Palestinians) now realise that they must make the solutions for themselves with the help of Arab states and friends around the world."

The Jordanian move also dispelled the "Israeli propaganda that there is a Jordanian option." Marlow said. "The option does MP Tim Wood, another member of the British parliamentary delegation, told the Jordan Times that Britain was awaiting moves by the Palestine National Council (PNC), which is expected to meet next month to discuss Palestinian options in the wake of the Jordanian decision.

"The British government will then be able to urge the United States to persuade Israel to take a more constructive role so there can be an international peace conference, which has prospects for success," Wood said.

Sanctions 'useless'

Asked whether he advocated imposing sanctions against Israel as a form of pressuring the Zionist state to end its oppression of the Palestinians living in the occupied territories, Marlow said Britain adheres to a policy circumventing sanctions "because we feel that they (sanctions) are use-

"I personally advocate sanctions against Israel but I also feel that the Palestinians living in the occupied territories would be hurt first and that the U.S. will continue to help Israel," Marlow

Wood said that the PNC would have to come up with political decisions and statements that could be used to persuade the U.S. and some Western states that it was time to press hard for a Middle East peace conference, "now is the opportunity that should be taken to avoid problems which could stretch into many more years." According to Wood, PNC statements and decisions have to "demonstrate that the majority of the Palestinians do want to renounce violence, accept the continuing existence of the state of Israel and that they are prepared and determined to negotiate with Israel to achieve self-determina-

Asked whether this meant that direct negotiations with Israel could rule out an international peace conference, Wood said: "No, the interests of many countries have to bear on the resolutions, but I do believe that there has to be a conference that involves all the concerned parties in the regions and, the Palestinians

A report carried by Reuter quoted Marlow Sunday as saying that he was told that South African military advisers were helping the Israeli army to quell the Palestinian uprising. Marlow told the Jordan Times that "we were given reports while we were there (in the occupied territories) that senior South African officers and generals were seen in civilian clothes walking around the camps with Israeli officers in uniform." He said that according to the reports, "they were probably discussing what action to take to contain the intifada, but we did not see them ourselves."

His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan, the Regent, met with the British delegation Saturday. Marlow said the Regent "gave us a very careful deeply though-out analysis. It was a very valuable addition to the information we had already collected."

CBJ opens wide financial competitiveness

Jordan floats interest rates, commissions

Jordan Times economics correspondent

AMMAN - A surprise and historic decision by the Central Bank of Jordan (CBJ) to float interest rates on deposits, current accounts and commissions drew positive reactions Sunday from bankers who described it as an appropriate and overdue response to

They said the move was sure to raise interest rates on deposits and loans and was expected to put more restrictions on credit and to curb speculation on the Jordan dinar.

The CBJ decision is seen by bankers as a positive move to increase deposits with higher interest rates that are competitive with interest paid on other foreign currencies abroad.

Dr. Jawad Hadid, deputy general manager of the Arab Jordan Investment Bank said the CBJ move came in response to market forces and the principle of supply and demand and to discourage speculation on the Jor-

"The government is keen to put more restrictions on credit to deter speculation on the dinar," Hadid told the Jordan Times.

He said the old interest rate structure allowed speculators to put pressure on the dinar by borrowing against the dinar without being penalised through an interest rate mechanism.

"Now, any speculation will lead to higher interest rates and vice versa." Hadid declared, adding that the government intends to put more restrictions on credit to check any inflationary pressures that could reduce the purchasing power of the dinar. He pointed out that the new measures will help maintain the value of the Jordanian currency in foreign exchange markets. On the other hand, Hadid acknowledged that higher interest rates would result in a "marginally higher cost on imports of goods and services and a decline in demand for credit." Bankers told the Jordan Times that the central bank has also allowed resident Jordanians to buy foreign currencies locally and open accounts in foreign currencies in Jordanian banks. The decision reverses a ban on such transactions introduced by the central bank last June.

Hadid believes that the new decision would restore flexibility in the domestic exchange market by allowing for the two markets - exchange houses and the banking system — to operate at the same time. He said that the ability of moneychangers to borrow money to buy foreign currencies have been curtailed by the new change on the interest rate structure.

Another banker, who preferred anonymity, said the decision was long overdue. "This decision

He expressed hope that the Ministry of Industry and Trade would cooperate by curbing imports of "unnecessary" goods to limit consumption and preserve the Kingdom's foreign reserves.

The banker said that the new measures will make interest on interest on foreign currencies such as the U.S. dollar.

He noted that the new situation would also increase competition among banks in Jordan and improve efficiency and the variety of services on the long run.

sword. It often propels the enemy to uncomfortable heights. But it some-times gives declarer an indication of how to play the hand. This example is from the recent Summer North American Championships. After North's one heart opening bid, East had a normal weak jump overcall of two spades. North-South found it impossible to stop below six diamonds, a slightly inele-

West led a spade to his partner's ace, and declarer won the club shift in hand. With nothing to guide him, declarer would normally cash a high trump in one hand or the other and then finesse for the queen. The contract would be unsalvageable. Here, however, declarer had good reason to suspect that West was more likely than East to hold the queen of trumps-because East has shown spade length in the auction, the odds increased that he would be shorter in diamonds than play West for long diamonds, he reasoned that he might as well pro-tect against the possibility of a 4-1

After winning the club shift in hand, declarer immediately ran the nine of diamonds. When that held, it was a simple matter to repeat the finesse, continue with a diamond to the ace and, after cashing the queen of clubs, return to hand with the king of hearts to draw the last trump. When the clubs broke evenly, declarer could claim the rest of the tricks. East did nothing abnormal in the auction. It was just unfortunate that he had to pay such a high penalty for an action that would be taken by most players in his position.

The 33-year-old Moses, seeking to become the first man to win three Olympic golds in the same running event, finished the 400metre hurdles final a distant third behind teammate Andre Phillips.

"I knew I was going against the odds from the beginning," said Moses, gold medallist at Montreal and Los Angeles.

Ashford, 31, yielded her crown as the Olympics fastest woman, to 28-year-old Florence Griffith Joyner, who won Sunday's 100metre dash in 10.54 seconds under the Olympic mark of 10.62 she set in qualifying Saturday. However, the time was windaided so it doesn't go into the record book.

Evert, also 33, was seeking to add Olympic gold to such past glories as 18 Grand-Slam titles. But she was eliminated from the Olympic tennis tournament by 22-year-old Raffaella Reggi of Italy, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1.

"The Olympics came too far into my career," she remarked afterwards.

Silivas, the newest Romanian darling, captured the balance beam, uneven parallel bars and floor exercise in the apparatus finale of the women's gymnastic competition. She also won a bronze in the vault behind Svetlana Boginskaia of the Soviet Union and fellow-Romanian Gabriela Potorac. Silivas final perfect score, her third straight in the event, came on the uneven bars.

The U.S. Olympic committee decided on punitive action Sunday after hearing the two swimmers' side of the story.

The facts as presented to us showed that indeed the two athletes took a piece wall decor from the hotel bar, took it out into the street and carried it into another bar...," said Robert Helmick, USOC president. "We expressed our keen regrets and they expressed theirs as well."

More scandals

Weightlifters Kalman Csengeri of Hungary and Fernando Mariasca of Spain were booted out of the games for positive drug tests Sunday, a day after Bulgaria pulled its scandal-ridden weightlifting team out of competition. The latest suspensions brought to six the number of athletes expelled during the first half of the 16-day Olympics.

Two of those expelled -Bulgarian weightlifters Mitko Grablev and Anguel Guenchev - were stripped of their gold medals after testing positive for a banned weight-reduction drug. The two weightlifters expelled Sunday finished out of medal contention in their divisions. Mariasca was the second Spaniard to fail an Olympic doping test, and the International Olympic Committee (IOC) issued a "strong warning" to the Spanish team doctors, saying it appeared they had given amphetamine to | ford.

Alexander Watson, an Australian pentathlete expelled Saturday for excessive levels of caffeine, has charged that an unnamed Romanian official had spiked his drink to have him thrown out because the Australian's own anti-drug campaign had embar-rassed the official. But the Australian team chief discounted

Watson's claim. Before the games end on Oct. Olympic medical officials anticipate that a total of 15 among the nearly 10,000 competitors will

Optimism surrounds southern Africa talks

NAIROBI (R) — South Africa, Angola and Cuba start a seventh round of peace talks on Angola and Namibia Monday amid diplomatic moves to end the escalating guerrilla war in Angola and mounting optimism that an accord is within reach.

Expectation that the three Namibia. sides meeting in Brazzaville under U.S. mediation can clinch a peace deal at this round has risen sharply after a visit to South Africa and Angola last week by United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.
